RE: V [REDACTED] C [REDACTED]

Dear Dr. Zukow:

I greatly appreciate your kind referral of C [REDACTED] V [REDACTED]. This three-day-old male had a neonatal circumcision by the OB at two days of age. He comes in now for evaluation of, what appears to be, excess skin.

Very careful examination reveals that the dorsal skin is almost down to the base of the penis. However, the inner skin is intact and is covering the coronal sulcus.

We have had experience with these in the past and they seem to heal up pretty well without any further treatment, as long as they are carefully watched. Skin grafting at this time is not indicated. The skin should heal. He may need a revision of the adhesions. I will see him in one week. I have asked that they bathe him twice a day and apply Polysporin ointment to the wound.

Sincerely,

Richard Shapiro, M.D.
